Golf Tip of the Month

Ben Hogan had the right attitude on short-iron shots. He said, "I want to be known as the man who hit them the straightest, not the longest." The 8-iron, 9-iron, and wedges are the control clubs, after all, so there's no point in trying to slug them. I do give these irons a full swing, but I enhance my control with an important change at address. Whereas I address the longer clubs in a square stance, on the short irons, I open things up a bit. I pull my >> left foot back a few inches from that parallel line so that I'm aligned a bit to the left of my target." Try this tip the next time out and see if your short irons don't go straighter!
